This she argued in her recent Ph.D study of the cultural practice of honor-related violence called Karo Kari. Her study based on her own experiences in the field which allowed her to observe this practice from multiple perspectives. Following the anthropological methodology, she has collected data for her research study while reporting on the same issue as a journalist, then as an academic and also remained a silent observer when elected as an administrator (District Nazima of Khairpur) of her area of fieldwork.
